Reflection:

We have a vision of life based on love, God-given love. The Good News tells us that there is life beyond death. And so, life is valuable, so valuable that it's worth living, loving, enjoying and cultivating. Our parish and the schools that are an integral part of it live out of that vision and share it. That means more than merely teaching Catholic RE. It means creating a culture with a broad understanding of life and people - a vision that is such that it can be shared even by those who do not adhere to Catholic beliefs. It means creating communities that can fire the heart as well as filling the mind. Our Catholic Schools are at their most authentic when they use the context of divine love to promote a sense of the individual's eternal value, when pupils and students learn and work together in a spirit of co-operation, mutual respect and trust. Our Catholic Schools are at their most authentic when they support parents in helping their children to develop and take their place in the world. This weekend, we remember staff members and school benefactors of the past, who were generous with their energies and resources for our young people and our Catholic Schools. We salute the work of the Sisters of Mercy, Presentation Brothers and the Patrician Brothers and the diocesan clergy, who in their different ways formed our Catholic Schools. And we are thankful to the Teachers, Management, Principals, Support Staff, Boards of Governors and Trustees who continue that work today.
