Reflection ~ The "Principle of Likeness" means that like knows like, love in me knows love. And hate in me will see hate everywhere else. If there's no love in you, if you are filled with fear and hatred, you will not know God. You actually can't. There's no abiding place for an infinite God in you, because your field is too small and safe. The infinite cannot abide inside of the finite unless the finite is somehow released from its small boundaries and attracted outward into a Larger Field. I actually think that is what we mean by "salvation." The commandments, you know, are not requirements to get God to love you. That is forever and already taken care of. Moral mandates are requirements for your own self expansion and transformation. How can you possibly be prepared to know the Ultimate Other, that some of us call God, if you cannot stretch yourself to meet the little every day needs of "others" that are often an irritant, a demand, a stretch? Each daily encounter is your chance for training and concrete practice in mercy, forgiveness, and compassion. As this love place grows within you, you will be more and more capable of knowing and loving God too. If you are a merciful, forgiving person, then I know you've met the real God. If you are narrow, stingy, and fearful, then you are worshiping something that is not God, probably some form of yourself.

Please help us at World Missions Ireland to share that gift of faith through your prayers and financial support of our missions.
