Reflection: (by Richard Rohr)

Many scholars over the years have pointed out that what is usually translated in Paul's letters as "faith in Christ" would be more accurately translated as "the faith of Christ." It's more than a change of prepositions. It means we are all participating in the faith journey that Jesus has already walked. That's a very different understanding of faith than most Christians enjoy. Most people think having faith means "to believe in Jesus." But, "to share in the faith of Jesus" is a much richer concept...By myself, I don't know how to have faith in God, but once we know that Jesus is the corporate stand in for everybody, we know we have already been taken on the ride through death and back to life. We are all participating in Jesus' faith walk with varying degrees of resistance and consent. Remember, it's God in you that loves God. You, on your own, don't really know how to love God. It's Christ in you that recognises Christ. It's the Holy Spirit, whose temple you are (1 Corinthians 3:16), that responds to the Holy Spirit. Like recognises like. That's why all true cognition is really recognition ("re-cognition" or knowing something again). Only so far as you have surrendered to Christ and allowed the Christ in you to come to fullness can you love Christ. It's Christ in you that recognises and loves Christ.
