Reflection When the local church is working, there is nothing like it. It is dazzling in its beauty and powerful in its simplicity. Lives are transformed and God's grace and love drizzles into countless communities like a gradual rain of hope, slowly and beautifully transforming lives. As local churches live out their calling to be communities of hope focussed on the truth and presence of God's kingdom, they become catalysts for change and conduits for transformation. Yet local churches are made up of individuals & leaders and congregations & who must make a choice about their focus and must decide what kind of community they want to be. Local congregations can do what government programmes, statutory agencies and other groups cannot do because at the heart of the local church is a deep-seated conviction that God is at work through us. But the answer is not for the church to be a substitute for the role of government but rather to be a vital partner with the state, and sometimes to be its prophetic interrogator.

May those of us who love God and know the privilege of being part of His church, rediscover the power of service, love and prophetic engagement with society -with those around who desperately need to know that the God we love also loves them and has a purpose for their lives. (Jim Wallis, Sojourners-Washington DC)

A thank you from Presidents Award students. We, the Saint Fanchas and Saint Josephs College students, who participated in the President's Award 2013-2014, would like to express our gratitude and appreciation to all members of the community who attended our tea/coffee event after 10.00am mass every Friday morning since September 2013. We really enjoyed providing the service and we felt that you enriched the experience for us and made it a very meaningful community event. The tea/coffee morning has now concluded and it is anticipated that it will resume again in the autumn term 2014, hosted by further President's Award students. Thank you.
